wise, different meta-metaphors drive fundamental views of adult cognitive development. We categorize two major types of meta-metaphors for adult development ladders and webs which engender different portraits of adult cognitive development. Developmental ladders characterize development as a simple fixed progression, following monotonic change, with one step following another in a single

Developmental Psychology Simply Psychology

Developmental changes during adulthood is an even more recent area of study. This is mainly due to advances in medical science, enabling people to live to an old age. Charles Darwin is credited with conducting the first systematic study of developmental psychology. In 1877 he published a short paper detailing the development of innate forms of communication based on scientific observations of his infant son, Doddy.
