Living Trust - Investopedia

Once the trust agreement for an irrevocable living trust is made, the named beneficiaries are set and the settlor can do little to amend that agreement.

The Benefits of a Revocable Living Trust vs. a Will

A revocable living trust can be "undone" if you change your mind. It's not necessarily permanent. If you elect to form a revocable living trust rather than write a will, you're always free to reverse your decision later. You may not want to, however. This type of trust has some distinct advantages over a last will and testament.

LIVING TRUSTS inter vivos trust - American Bar Association

A living trust is one of the two main ways to avoid probate. (The other is joint tenancy or survivorship.) One of the purposes of probate is to determine the disposition of the property you leave at death. Since the trustee of your living trust owns that property, there is no need for probate. Living trusts have become extremely popular in recent years.
